The Epiphany of the Lord January 8, 2023

The Feast of God's Restless Heart - Pope Benedict XVI January 6, 2012

What kind of people were the Wise Men? ...

They were, as we might say, men of science, but not simply in the sense that they were searching for a wide range of knowledge: they wanted something more. ... They wanted to understand what being human is all about.

They were men with restless hearts, not satisfied with the superficial and the ordinary. They were men in search of the promise, in search of God. And they were watchful men, capable of reading God's signs, his soft and penetrating language.

... For them it mattered little what this or that person, what even influential and clever people thought and said about them.

For them it was a question of truth itself, not human opinion.

Hence, they took upon themselves the sacrifices and the effort of a long and uncertain journey.

Their humble courage was what enabled them to bend down before the child of poor people and to recognize in him the promised King, the one they had set out, on both their outward and their inward journey, to seek and to know.

The restless heart ... is ultimately satisfied with nothing less than God, and in this way becomes a loving heart.

Our heart is restless for God and remains so, even if every effort is made today, by means of most effective anaesthetizing methods, to deliver people from this unrest.

But not only are we restless for God: God's heart is restless for us.

God is waiting for us. He is looking for us.

He knows no rest either, until he finds us. God's heart is restless, and that is why he set out on the path towards us – to Bethlehem, to Calvary, from Jerusalem to Galilee and on to the very ends of the earth.

God is restless for us, he looks out for people willing to “catch” his unrest, his passion for us, people who carry within them the searching of their own hearts and at the same time open themselves to be touched by God's search for us.

Dear friends, ...

let yourselves be touched by God's unrest, so that God's longing for man may be fulfilled.
